

PwC's e-discovery and managed review services

Your first line of defence in crisis and litigation

The ever-changing data and discovery environment

- The rise in regulatory inquiries and internal probes in recent years has made data more important than ever before. The digital world has significantly transformed, with the amount of unstructured and complicated data owned by businesses increasing at an exponential rate. This has had an impact on how businesses store, manage and retrieve data, particularly during times of crisis.
- With our comprehensive e-discovery solutions, you can identify, preserve, gather and produce electronic documents in a consistent, defensible and cost-effective manner – ranging from data collection to document review to evidence evaluation.

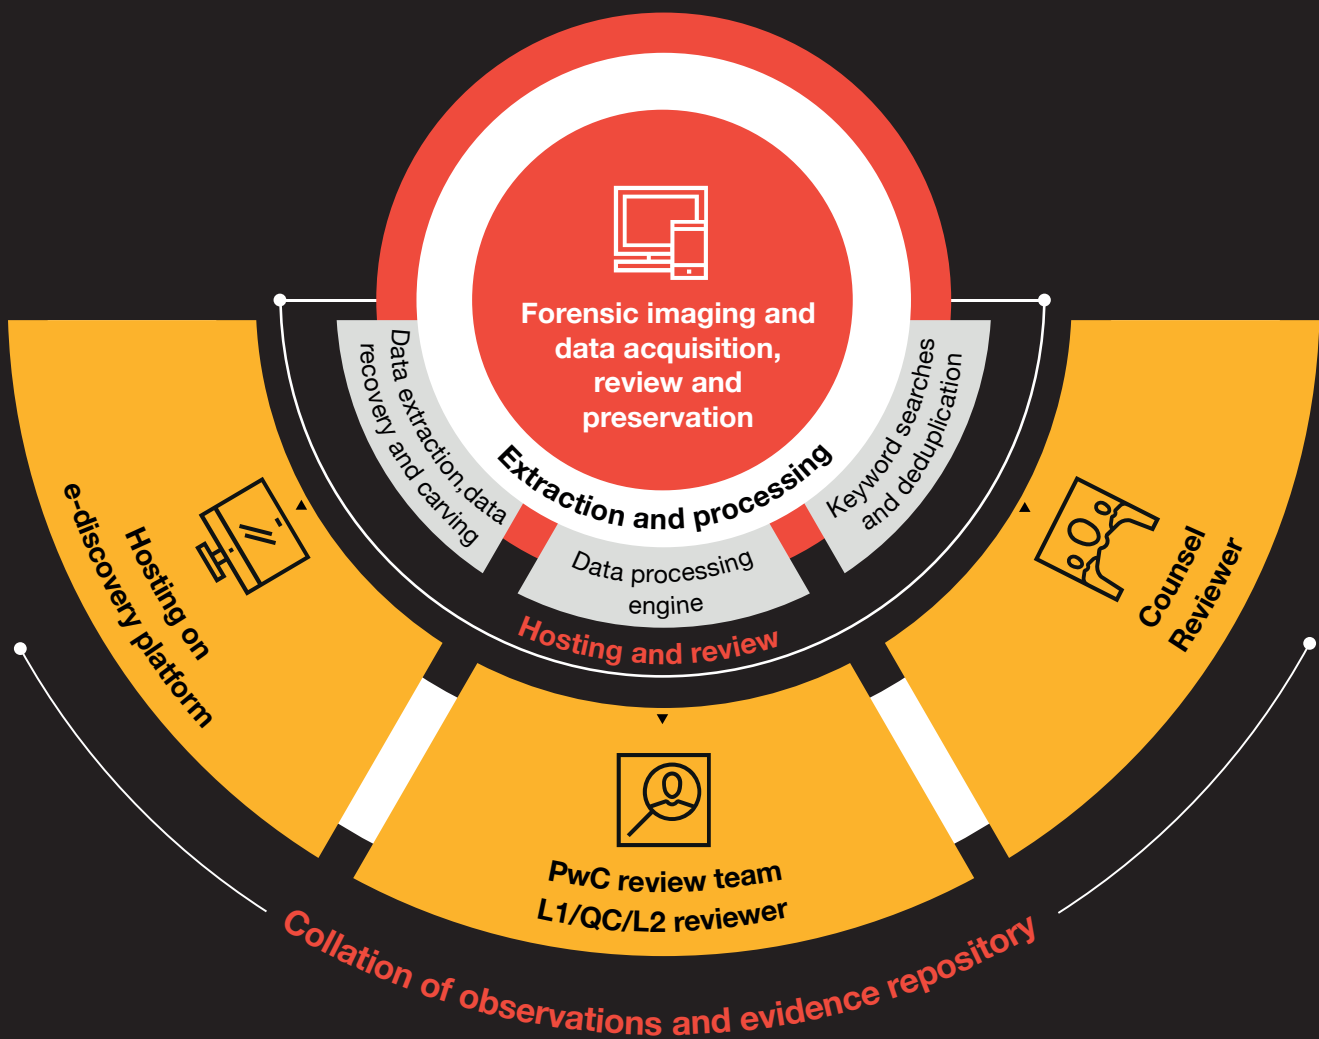

Scope of e-discovery solutions

What sets us apart

- We have cutting-edge forensic technology labs and have partnered with the best technology providers in the world.
- We have processed several terabytes of data in critical matters while adhering to strict deadlines.
- To review millions of documents in a short period of time, our review approach draws on the greatest artificial intelligence and machine learning practices, allowing us to cut turnaround time.
- Our e-discovery professionals can predict concerns ahead of time, allowing you to respond quickly to a crisis and make informed decisions.
- We don't believe in a one-size-fits-all strategy and instead create a system tailored to your specific needs.
- We follow global best practices that are forensically sound and accepted by courts and regulatory bodies around the world.
- All of this, together with our knowledge of privileged reviews, enables us to provide end-to-end services with ease and in the most cost-effective way possible.
